

Show off your photographs of Granby's agriculture

If you enjoy taking pictures, you will have an opportunity to show some of them off at the "Photographic Art of Local Agriculture" show to be held at Holcomb Farm in conjunction with the Taste of Granby the third week in September. The photos will be displayed in the recently renovated Workshop building.

You may use traditional film or digital photography, color or black and white, to capture the agricultural life in Granby or our contiguous neighboring towns. From preparing of fields and planting of seeds to the glorious summertime harvest and bountiful farm stands, there is ample opportunity to capture some of these scenes for all to enjoy.

Show organizers Wendy Van Welie and Shirley Murtha ask that the photos be 11" x 14" and be framed for hanging. There is a $10 entry fee, (checks made payable to Holcomb Farm) for which you can submit as many as three entries. Photos should be brought to the Indigo Images Photography studio, 25 Hartford Ave., by Wednesday, Sept. 1. If you have questions or intend to participate in this event, please register at www.indigoimagesllc@msn.com so that you will receive reminders and updates as the summer rolls along.

Although this is not a contest, the organizers reserve the right to determine suitability. Get out those cameras and start clicking! There are plenty of baby sheep and goats on the scene to get you motivated.
